U.S. Warned High Low Pr. By Group In Land Dispute

> ABIQUIU, N.M. (AP) - An armed Spanish-American group which seeks a showdown for ownership of a New Mexico forest area has warned the federal wrath of our people.

But there were increasing indications that U.S. officials were preparing to respond at last to the challenges of the past 10 days by the Federal Alliance of Land Grants.

Alliance members swarmed into the Carson National Forest of north-central New Mexico Saturday, set up a self-proclaimed court to try two IIS forest rangers for trespassing and warned the government against retaliation. The alliance also spent the previous weekend in the area. But the FBI in Washington confirmed Sunday that warrants had been issued. Legal aspects of the case had been holding up plans to serve the warrants, the FBI indicated.

By occupying the land the al liance hopes to force the government to take the case to court and accept the burden proof of ownership.

Back The Mental Health Levy

"In our family we have a loved one who is mentally ill, and now confined to a hospital.

"No one knows unless they have had a similar experience the heartache of a mother and immediate family when this occurs to someone you love dearly.

"Many people do not realize how hard it is to get mentally ill people in a hospital for treatment. There just aren't enough beds.

"If everyone who is mentally ill could get help earlier, they wouldn't need to be hospitalized. Not everyone can afford to go to a psychiatrist. So I hope that everyone who reads this letter will vote for the mental health levy Nov. 8 as so many need help and cannot receive it for lack of funds. This levy, if passed, will mean that more people can be helped if they but ask for it.'

It would be difficult to present a more realistic case for the two - tenths of a mill levy than the heart - felt appeal contained in the above letter from an East Liverpool resident. Funds realized would mean the staff at the Columbiana County Mental Health Clinic in Lisbon could be enlarged and the services expand-

The need is there. Ponder these disturbing facts from the National Assocaition for Mental Health - More of today's children will go on to a mental hospital than to college; more persons are sick with mental problems than with all of the diseases known to man, including cancer, heart disease, tuberculosis and others; at least 50 per cent of all surgical and medical cases have a mental illness complication, and approximately 10 per cent of all school children have emotional problems requiring psychiatric

The proposed tax levy would provide funds through 1970 for the operation of the clinic at a cost of only two cents for each $100 dollars of valuation for those who would pay the bill.

The Review strongly urges that you vote "Yes" for the proposal. The mental health problem is ever present. The longer we wait to provide the proper corrective measures the more pressing, demanding and serious the problem will become.

Worthy Workshop

Like other professions, education can't afford to stand still in the ever - changing world of

Workshops such as that held here last week are one of the methods of meeting the challenge. The consensus seems to be that the gettogether served its purpose well

East Liverpool is happy to have been able to play host to more than 1,000 educators from Columbiana County school systems, the consultants and others who joined together to make the program worth while.

'Spooks' Are On The Loose

The "spooks" will be on the loose again now through Halloween. And when they roam the traffic problem becomes more acute.

Once again officials of the Columbiana County Motor Club suggest some advance precautions which will help keep tragedy out of what is intended to be a happy occasion

Urging cooperation by both parents and motorists, the AAA reminds that the youngsters face added dangers because they will be out at night when visibility is limited, may be wearing dark costumes and vision - reducing masks and are likely to be extra excited and less cau-

The Game Goes On

Thoughts On The Warren Commission

By Raymond Moley

President Johnson's purpose in creating the Warren Commission was to prevent the growth of irresponsible rumor and speculation about the assassination of John F. Kennedy

Nearly three years after the tragedy and more than two years since the Warren report was made public, rumor, speculation and wild surmise still prevail. Public confidence in the commission's competence has been almost

The amazing thing is that the most penetrating criticism of the commission and its report is embodied in a book wraten by a 30-year-old graduate student who began his research as a routine academic assignment

Edward Jay Epstein was a student at Cornell. His professor suggested that as an exercise in political science he write his master's thesis on the Warren Commission, because it represented an interesting example of an extra-judicial and quasi-official method of investigating a murder of great national importance.

THE PRESIDENT was moved to create the commission because the FBI, Secret Service and law-enforcement machinery in Texas were parties of interest. They all had borne some responsibility for the security of the President.

Epstein, working for many months without any of the powerful authority given to the Warren Commission, has shown in his book. "Inquest," that the chief justice and his associates failed in many vital respects.

Members of the commission were distinguished people who because of their many commitments gave inadequate time to their work The associate counsel were busy lawyers and bestowed upon their subordinates most of the essential tasks of the investigation.

A great number of witnesses were heard, but

A Campaign Pot

WASHINGTON

Congressional approval of the plan for government financing of presidential campaigns may be just the first step in a complete overhaul of America's ancient campaign spending daws.

The basic U. S. election law, the Corrupt Practices Act, has lasted virtually unchanged since 1925. It limits national parties to $3 million and sets strict limits on contributions and spending by lesser candidates.

One result has been a proliferation of political campaign groups, each spending $3 million. Another has been heated competition among state. local and national groups for the contributors'

THE NEW PLAN would permit income tax payers to divert $1 of their tax payments each year into a fund from which the major parties would draw up to $30 million in 1968 for campaign expenses.

Sen. Russell B. Long. D-La., has been advocating the plan for several years and last week succeeded in adding it to a tax bill relating to foreign investment in the United States. It would cover presidential elections only.

Congress approved the tax bill with its campaign - financing rider. President Johnson is expected to sign the measure into law.

Although many feel that the plan could later be extended to cover gubernatorial and congressional races, others point out mere existence of the plan will greatly ease pressure on state and local candidates who have had to scrounge ior funds from contributors who already have given to national tickets

Thus, the bill could prove a boon to congressmen beset by the soaring cost of waging House and Senate campaigns.

One effect of the plan would be to permit Republicans and Democrats to plan campaigns with the assurance enough money will be on hand to pay for prime television time which must be contracted for well in advance.

GONE WILL be the frantic scurrying about that marked campaigns such as Adlai E. Stevenson's in 1952 when several nationally - televised speeches nearly had to be postponed because of lack of funds.

Disadvantages exist, and undoubtedly bugs in the system would have to be removed in the vears ahead.

The existence of sufficient funds may make candidates even less interested in televised debates, and the free time and widespread exposure that accompany them.

there was very little cross-examination, which would have served to straighten out discrepancies and contradictions in their testimony. Certain witnesses who might have been most useful were not questioned at all. In the hasty writing of the final report there seemed to be an effort to concentrate guilt upon Oswald and to depict him as an individual -a "loner"-who, for reasons which have never been established, planned and carried out the crime with no accomplices and never a clear motive.

THAT MORE than one weapon was used by more than one person was not effectively pursued though the available evidence seems to point to that probability. Epstein says in substance that while the commission was designed to accomplish two purposes - find the facts and allay public suspicions - the latter purpose got in the way of The researches of Epstein and many others who have written articles and books during the past months have shaken the belief of many thoughtful people that the case was closed when Warren submitted his report in 1964. After a careful reading of the Epstein thesis and a rereading of the conclusions in the Warren report, I must be counted among the

Prior to the tragedy of Nov. 22, 1963. three presidents were assassinated. In two cases the assassins, Booth and Czologosz, were politically motivated. Guiteau, who killed President Garfield, acted on his own.

In the case of Oswald there were suspicious earlier political associations. The failure of the Warren Commission to trace those associations constitutes, in my judgment, the most serious flaw in the report.

The new - found party affluence would likely mean big salaries for the national party chairmen and their staffs.

Small parties would not qualify for federal payments until they polled five million votes, something no minor party has ever been able

Adoption of the Long plan could lead to serious congressional study next year of a bill introduced by Reps. Robert T. Ashmore, D-S.C., and Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., to lift most spending restrictions but tighten enforcement by creating a federal elections commission with power to regulate spending for all federal of-

Harry Byrd

By David Lawrence

A Lesson In Courage, Integrity

Harry F. Byrd of Virginia is gone, but the lesson which his career teaches has enduring significance. He manifested courage and interrity amid the hypocrises of political life.

There are all sorts of definitions of "conservatism," but most of them did not fit Harry Byrd. Nor could be be described by many of the other "isms" and phrases currently used to describe persons who do not believe in misapplying other people's money to gain vot-The departed senator was unequivocally the champion of common honesty in government and of a public servant's obligation to spend taxpayers' money and borrowed funds with the same frugality as if it were his private Harry Byrd was known as a "progressive"

when he became governor of Virginia in 1926. He put through the state legislature the nation's first anti-lynching law. There hasn't been a lynching since in Virginia.

He undertook a major highway-building program and put it on a pay-as-you-go basis He reorganized the state government by consolidating 100 agencies into 12 departments.

Gov. Byrd came to the U.S. Senate on March 4, 1933 - the dismal day when banks throughout the country were ordered closed indefinitely. He had supported Franklin D. Roosevelt because of the pledge in the Democratic party's 1932 platform to cut federal expenses at least 25 per cent.

OVER THAT issue he later had differences with the Roosevelt administration, but he always felt he was one of the original New Dealers and it was not he but others who strayed from the party platform.

Why was Sen. Byrd so absorbed in the subject of sound fiscal policy? He was frustrated as a young man due to the financial difficulties of his parents. He couldn't afford to go to college. At 15, he took over the weekly newspaper established by his family, which had been plunged into bankruptcy. As he met with success, he bought land and became one of the world's largest growers of apples.

What he learned in making ends meet made an indelible impression, as so often happens with self-made men.

He followed the commands of an ever-present conscience, irrespective of the temptations of politics. He never voted on any bill that could affect his own property. He didn't accept a cent of federal money for his farming operations and once had a technical amendment inserted in a law that would disqualify him from benefiting from a measure affecting certain securities he held.

He regarded public office as a sacred responsibility - a trusteeship which required an unswerving fidelity to the cause of fiscal as well as social responsibility.

MANY theorists have never known what it means to borrow money from a bank or accept capital from investors to start and carry on a business, then to meet these obligations. Sen. Byrd thought of public funds in the same way. He never forgot that individual citizens struggling for a livelihood paid out their hardearned money in taxes every year with a blind faith that governmental authorities would deal honestly with the citizens' earnings. He always had the ideals of a progressive but the common sense of a conservative who knows that however honestly a man may operate his business he is no less a bankrupt if he fails to pay back what he owes. Anybody who dissents from the whimsical doctrines of expediency and insists instead on constitutional methods is called a "negativist." The speeches of Sen. Byrd will long be remembered as a series of warnings on the biggest single issue that faces the American people today - how to keep the government from going "bankrupt.

Dear Let Down: The man who wrote was more than "concerned." He said he was sorry he had been born and crazy world. His sentiments reflected a deep state of depression.

The experts tell me this type of anxiety is produced by something closer to the inner core than "our insane foreign policy." So I told him, "It's less painful to blame the state of the world for your unhappiness than to look inside really is bothering you."

I agree that people should be concerned about the state of the world, but concern is meaningless unless it is translated into action. To worry one's self to the point of illness is not, in my opinion, either realistic or an evidence "sound mental health."

Peace is not automatic. If we want a safe and secure world we must work for it. Many excellent organizations are working for peace and I urge all Americans who share their objectives to become involved in these organizations-

New Cities Plan Seen As Having Global Potential

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) Robert C. Weaver, secretary of housing and urban development, said today the new demonstration cities program has worldwide potential, even in such a war-torn city as Saigon.

In a talk prepared for a United Nations seminar on urban problems. Weaver said knowledge gained from the demonstration cities program will be made available not only to American cities but to cities around the world.

"I can think of no better place where a total approach of this kind could apply than in Saithe secretary said.

Weaver told planning, housing and public works officials from 26 nations that the urban crisis is a world problem and solutions common to U.S. slums and blighted neighborhoods could well be applied in foreign cities. Under the $1 1-billion demonstration cities bill approved last week by Congress, concerted efforts would be made to improve the total environment of blighted areas in some cities Along with improved housing would come programs for imSTORE HOURS: 9 A.M. Tips Are Offered On Use Of Paint

AP Newsfeatures

Question: I am getting ready to paint the outside of my wooden house. I have had some trouble in the past with peeling and blistering and have been told that I can avoid this if I use a water-thinned latex paint. If this true? And what are its other advantages and disadvantages?

Answer: Generally, latextype paints permit moisture to go through them to a degree. which is known as "breathing." Thus, water does not accumulate under the paint and cause blistering and peeling.

But you lose this advantage if there already is oil paint on the wood, which seems to be so in this case. In that event. you must remove all the old paint, a not-too-easy job, especially if there are several lavers of paint. Latex paints can be thinned with water. Brushes can be cleaned with water. The job thus is a lot less messy.

On the other hand, good quality oil paints have better covering power than most latex paints, which means that a single coat often will be sufficient Should you decide to use an oil paint rather than remove all the old paint prior to the application of latex paint, you still must prepare the surface care-

Scrape off all loose paint and sand down irregular parts of the wood. Follow the directions on the can of the particular paint you purchase to determine whether a primer is necessary and, if so, what kind. The same advice applies to the instructions on a can of la-

SECOND FLOOR EXPANSION

TYPICAL OF THE COLONIAL FARM type, this plan has the "built-on" look. There are three basic units with different roof heights. Recognizable details of the exterior include: picket fence, multi-lite bay window, curved arches, shutters and cupola. The large expanse of rear living room dominates the interior beyond large fover. The kitchen is sized to the farm type variety but streamlined to modern efficiency. The bedroom wing is isolated for privacy and quiet yet is directly accessible to balance of the house. Typical service porch at front provides covered walk from garage and controls traffic through the balance of the house. There is 1.543 square feet on the first floor and 638 square feet on the second. Plan HA-468M is by architect R. A. Mattern, 89 E. Jericho Turnpike, Mineola, N.Y, 11501.
